I want to write "the sense of liberation that artists have tried to find in Greek art." Is the word 'cercato' defined in this site as an adjective, but is it not also a verb with a definition similar to 'find'? I don't know if the phrase "try to find" is redundant or not. Thank you «Search to find» is redundant. One wouldn't look for something he didn't want to find! You should say "researched in Greek art" or "founded in Greek art." Oh, of course, I didn't realize that "try" was the verb "search"! That's why I was so surprised to see it defined just as an adjective! Thank you! searched As verbs the difference between sought and finding is that searched is (searched) while finding it is meeting or discovering by chance; happen.
